European Antibody Congress 2016

Description

European Antibody Congress 2016

From huge advances in cancer therapies and immune system modulation to recent developments in Immune checkpoints, T-Cell biology, neurological applications, treating infectious disease to creating vaccines: antibody based drugs are set to have profound effects in every area of medicine in the very near future.

Covering everything from discovery and development to getting an antibody to market: an innovative, forward looking and forward thinking conference programme is a key feature of the European Antibody Congress 2016. Which is why we work so hard to get it right. Based on direct research with pharma, biotech, non-profit, and academic experts in the antibody sector, the agenda is sure to cover the hottest topics for the audience.
